This is the most relaxing route. Recommended.. The Developers abandoned the game.
Still very buggy.

It had good ideas but in the end its a worst XCOM 2 to be honest.. 50 Years is one of those casual and fun strategy games without the boring and tedious elements of micro management and drawn out battles.. This was one of the best puzzle games I ever played. The first few levels help introduce the players to the game mechanics, and the last few really work out your brain. The only downside to the game is it only has 30 levels- I think there should be more. Would play again. Vampire is the sequel to exceed gun bullet children and it really feels so, the gameplay is revamped, the soundtrack is awesome and the action feels more fast paced.

In this game you can't choose a character like in the previous one, and the main feature is polarity changing, dealing more dmg to the inverse polarity while being immune to the current one, pretty much like ikaruga.

If you care about cards you might want to buy the entire saga to recover most of the money you spent, if you only want a good shmup bullet hell then just buy this game separately.. we need the first game on steam too pls. Developer abandoned the project. Taking the controls of these class 390 is more relaxing and easy than a class 86, but at high speeds you cannot loose concentration. Know your braking distances and you will control the massive horsepower of these modern trains.

The sound especially is pretty good, except the horn. Shame there isn't more interactive controls in-cab.. Do you have an acute taste in beard fashion?

Yes? then you will love this game!

No? Then you must play this game to aquire a taste of beard fashion, for beard fashion is one of the truly great arts of this century!!!!!!!!!!!!!! Is actually pretty fun, surprised i didnt refund

Interesting little puzzle game about owls, a good time killer that's for sure so ya, I can recommend it!. This is a funny fun little game that I do recommend, but it would be more fun and more funny of a game if I could play it with my friend.

If anyone working on this game sees this, please make the multiplayer work. Trying to join other people does nothing, hosting a game does nothing, accepting my friend's invites do nothing. The multiplayer just does not work.

Again, I do recommend it, but I'd recommend it more if you could actually play with other people. For now, enjoy the single player mode.. Thought it was a game about a social weekend road trip to the wine region of Napa Valley, have to say I was massively disappointed.. Schein is a nice game, but the first boss was so difficult I simply wasn't able to kill it. Literally half my playthrough was with this boss and after the millionth try, I just gave up, it's simply not worth the effort.. Great game for memes.. Very repetitive, too simple. Challenge comes from gaining a high score rather than surviving, but the game is too chaotic and the controls too poor to make it fun replaying to get a higher score.. I don't write reviews but the value + playability + yeehaw! factor of this game made me do it. I want to be helpful so I will keep this short and focused.

Asteroids for grownups on LSD may represent the controls, the purpose, and the environment. Only one other metaphor is missing but I couldn't remember any games that did it. The maps you play on run a pre-programmed series of changes that alternately confound and isolate. Big open map starts and you are spinning and dodging to avoid enemies as they home in on you, then a warning sequence begins and you have to figure out where you think you should be. A level transformation won't kill you but it could leave you in a wholly isolated -tiny tiny- box of sadness for a few seconds. And while you are there, your new mini slice of the whole map is still spawning enemies in a 3" x 3" anxiety pool. When it happened to me I thought I might have found the fatal flaw in the design concept, then my prison cell burped homing death triangles at me and I just spun, fired, and laughed.

I like to shop on Steam for the 0.01 - 5.99 range of games looking for gems. This game, for the number of game modes (and each of the game modes has options for how you play that mode) and the pucker factor, is a gem.

I think I paid 2.99 for this title and I was satisfied in the first few minutes I played it.

Have fun--. Boo I'd rather watch videos than pay 49 cents. Don't you also make more with us watching videos?. A quirky but strangely addictive little shooter. Not a traditional FPS as you snipe from a couple of fixed points per map (like different windows from a building for example). It claims to be like Lemmings with guns but that's not really accurate either. The hostage you're trying to protect only moves when you shoot so you really have to decide who to shoot next. It's further complicated by patrolling guards so timing is key as well. What results can be infuriatingly difficult at times but extremely satisfying when you get it right. There's also equipment upgrades (sights, weapons, tripods and the like) to add a bit of grindability to it as well.

It's early access at the moment but what's there is easily worth $5 already. The Dev has been very reactive in squashing reported bugs and hopefully with more levels and more equipment as well as the challenge of trying to beat the best scores per level (online) the longevity should be more than adequate for the price being asked. A little gem.. You know, I don't even think I'm playing this game 100% correctly, and I'm having a blast. There's just something really special about a game that lets you kill an armed guard by going back in time, grabbing a chair with your telekinetic powers, going forward in time and launching the chair at the guard. Alternatively, you can just launch a guard into the air repeatedly until the fall damage kills him. Massively entertaining.
